

Hatchet

by Gary Paulsen

Spawning at the tail end of a plane that is submerged in water your students will look out over the water to a spruce covered mountain rising up. In the distance daunting snowy peaks litter the landscape. This survival world pits your students against the harsh Canadian wilderness. Let your student experience everything Brian Robeson had to struggle through as he tries to survive against all odds. Hunger, angry wild animals, a creepy plane crash and much more are included in this survival map. This world was based of Gary Paulsen's short novel Hatchet.

Students are given 6 assignments to complete. How will your student fair in a true survival scenario? Will they be brave enough to venture deep into the submerged plane? Will they work together to survive? Or will hunger and the fear of the unknown prevent them from exploring the details of this map?
